The Fundamentals of Teaching Series for Graduate Students

Fundamentals of Teaching in the Humanities and Social Sciences
Tuesday, Jan. 9, 16, 23 & 30 | 3:30PM – 5:00PM | Wieboldt 310 D/E
Facilitated by Sr. Grad Fellow Natalie Farrell and Grad Fellow Anna Berlekamp

Fundamentals of Teaching in STEM
Tuesday, Jan. 16, 23 & 30 and Feb. 6 | 10:30AM – 12:00PM | Wieboldt 310 D/E
Facilitated by Sr. Grad Fellow Caitlin Wong Hickernell and Grad Fellow Ava Polzin

Register: bit.ly/FoTS23

The Fundamentals of Teaching Series aims to productively address the challenges and questions graduate students new to teaching roles (e.g., TAs, CAs, interns) face in the first weeks of the quarter and to help them develop core competencies in teaching for facilitating and enhancing student learning. The Fundamentals sessions are led by CCTL Graduate Fellows who will draw on these ideas, their own experiences, and the insights of the participants, to cultivate a supportive learning community and empower participants to create supportive learning communities in their own classrooms.

Through the Fundamentals of Teaching Series, participants will be able to:

- Reflect on the practice of teaching by considering how different pedagogical practices can facilitate, enhance, or hinder student learning.
- Apply key pedagogical concepts and practice to the specific contexts of their own teaching.
- Experience a supportive community of fellow teachers with whom they can share their questions and concerns.
- Gain greater confidence in their ability to teach.

Please contact teaching@uchicago.edu with any questions about the Fundamentals of Teaching Series.